LONGWOOD GARDENS

WINTER

Winter Wonder
January 22–March 27
Winter Wonder

On View
January 22–March 27

This winter, experience a warm, colorful oasis in our grand Conservatory. Vibrant Streptocarpus ‘Concord Blue’ baskets float above, Saintpaulia (African-violets) delight, and tall Clerodendrum schmidtii (chains-of-glory) stun. From Cymbidium to highlights from our vast collection, find hundreds of orchids in beautiful bloom.

Outside, stroll through 400 acres and explore the beauty of Mother Nature in winter. Find the occasional burst of bright yellow and orange of witch-hazel nestled among textural winter grasses.

Winter at Longwood … the best of both worlds.
Join us on Member Appreciation Day to enjoy the beauty of the Gardens while also taking advantage of one-day-only double discounts (20% off!) in The Garden Shop, 1906, and the Café.

Photographing the Winter Garden
Onsite: January 28 and February 11, 7–10 am
Online: February 24 and March 3, 6–7 pm
Join us in a thoughtful observation of a garden at rest. Along with expert instructors, venture into our Gardens to capture the “bones” of the garden, from the intricate structures of tree branches to the lines and textures of stone to bark.

Diversify Your Harvest: Exceptional Herbs and Uncommon Veggies
Fully Online
February 28, 5:30–7:30 pm
Join Longwood Horticulturist Alex Correia online as she explores underutilized, exotic, and heirloom varieties of vegetables and herbs that deserve a place in your garden, as well as shares how these plants are grown in Longwood’s Idea Garden. Hungry for more? After the class you’ll be sent a selection of seeds for your own edible gardening.

Longwood at The Creamery: Plantology On Tap
We’ve proudly teamed up with The Creamery of Kennett Square to offer engaging horticultural experiences in a spirited community space. Join us at The Creamery for our themed offerings, featuring a botanical talk paired with a delicious small bite and signature cocktail to round out the fun.

Plantology On Tap: True Confessions of a Houseplant Serial Killer
January 20, 5:30–6:30 pm (Doors open at 4:30 pm)
Whether we choose to admit it or not, we’ve all had to say goodbye to a beloved houseplant. Maybe it was the first time we tried caring for a houseplant or maybe it’s the one plant your green thumb just doesn’t seem to be able to bring back from the brink. Join Longwood Continuing Education Instructor Bridget Wosczyna as she explores the trials and tribulations of growing a variety of houseplants, sharing the stories of those she has lost and how she uses those losses to inform her for future success. Share your own houseplant fails over a seasonal cocktail and small bite with fellow houseplant serial killers and, armed with your new knowledge, take home a new plant and try again!
Join Our Community Read

Read. Think. Engage.

Join us as we explore the concept of trees as nature’s great connectors, and how trees may help us gain insight into ourselves and our places in the world with our 2022 Community Read.

Our award-winning Community Read brings books and people together to spur discussion about an important idea or topic. Highlighting a different book each year and working with more than 50 partner organizations, we’ve explored a wide range of topics … and for the ninth year of our Community Read, we’re asking readers:

What would a tree tell us if we just took the time to listen?

Get the Books and Start Reading!

This year’s selections showcase the trees—how they represent growth, peace, and nature, and how they teach us how to plant deep roots and reach for the sky.

In our featured book, The Songs of Trees: Stories from Nature’s Great Connectors, journey around the world with David Haskell as he repeatedly visits a dozen trees in cities from Manhattan to Jerusalem, forests, and areas on the front lines of environmental change from eroding coastlines to burned mountainsides and war zones. In each place he shoes how human history, ecology, and well-being are intricately intertwined, revealing the biological connections that underpin all life.

Designed for middle school readers, the engaging graphic novel Canopy Career Chronicles by the team at the Morton Arboretum (Illinois), follows the stories of eight people pursuing careers caring for and protecting trees. Each character’s journey takes a different path, highlighting the skills, experiences, and inspirations of this diverse field of professionals.

For our youngest readers, We Planted a Tree by Diane Muldrow and illustrated by Bob Staake is a poetic picture book that focuses on two young families in two very different parts of the world as they each plant a tree. As the trees flourish, so do the families.
Community Read Events

Trees Living Apart from Humans–A Community Read Conversation
April 14: 6:30–7:45 pm
Fully Online
Free; Advance registration required

In Part 1 of his book The Songs of Trees: Stories from Nature’s Great Connectors, David Haskell explores the network of life and believes that trees are a central part of those connections. Haskell will be joined by ethnobotanist Chief Dennis Coker of the Lenape Tribe of Delaware for a conversation about the interconnections of trees and humans, and how those ideas relate to our region.

Trees Living in Cities–A Community Read Conversation
April 21: 6:30–7:45 pm
Fully Online
Free; Advance registration required

Trees are an important component of urban landscapes as David Haskell describes in Part 3 of his book, The Songs of Trees: Stories from Nature’s Great Connectors. They shade our sidewalks, feed us, and are vehicles of creative beauty. Amidst the hustle of our human lives these trees frequently go unnoticed, but the connection is indeed profound. Join Haskell, Georgia Silvera Seamans of the Washington Square Park Eco Projects, and Jessica Turner-Skoff of The Morton Arboretum as they discuss how trees in bustling cities use their embodied network to contribute to the life of humans.

2022 Scout Programs

Registration Opens February 8

Scout Programs

Embark on inquiry-based programs in the beauty of our Gardens. Available to both Boy and Girl Scouts of any level, our 90-minute, onsite programs are available select Saturdays and Sundays. Longwood Fun Patches are provided for all participating Scouts.

Tree Discovery Program

Share in our rich history of collecting trees since the 1800s and explore the wide variety of tree species that grow on the property. Learn how to recognize differences in leaves, bark, and shape to aid in identifying trees in your own environment. Learn to appreciate these natural wonders and become a better steward of trees.

Scouts will also learn about careers in horticulture, use their senses and tools to discover characteristics of deciduous and coniferous trees, discover how to tell a tree’s age, and bring home a tree cookie of their very own.

Plant Discovery Program

With more than 6,000 species on display, Longwood is the perfect place to explore the exciting world of plants and see a variety of plants from native to unique species. Get a glimpse of what horticulturists do daily to maintain the variety of flora throughout the Gardens. Discover unique characteristics to aid in identifying plants growing in any natural environment. Scouts will notice plants growing everywhere, even under their own two feet!

Scouts will also learn about careers in horticulture, discover characteristics of common plants growing in the Gardens, compare differences in seeds, and get their own seeds to grow at home.

Since embarking upon Longwood Reimagined: A New Garden Experience in March 2021, we have made great strides in the realization of this milestone project—the most ambitious expansion and preservation of our Conservatory and surrounding landscape in a century, opening in fall 2024.

In the meantime, we wanted to share a behind-the-scenes project update with you, our Members. You have been with us through it all, and you continue to inspire us to keep creating and sharing the beauty that is Longwood—and we’re delighted to share with you our Longwood Reimagined progress to date.

As part of the initial phase of Longwood Reimagined, we’re preserving and expanding the display capabilities of our century-old Orchid House, while returning its layout to its original configuration. Upon its reopening, up to 50 percent more orchids from our collection will be on display throughout the year. Orchid House progress includes the installation of a new glass roof on its existing pyramidal structural frame. We’ve also created a new vestibule to allow for temperature control for the orchids inside, new lighting, and new custom trellises on which to display our orchids.

Preservation is at the heart of our Orchid House transformation, as is close attention to detail. The Orchid House bronze display case, first added in 1929 and then restored in 1966, has been restored and moved to a new location within the Orchid House. In its new location, it will serve much like storefront windows, showcasing a rotating selection of our orchids.

We are also restoring the interior and exterior concrete, with the interior concrete aggregate now complete. Just like the adjacent Main Conservatory and Camellia House, the Orchid House’s historic concrete is a particularly notable feature, as these buildings are one of the first major projects of the John J. Earley Studio in Washington DC, led by John Joseph Earley (1881–1945), who was considered a pioneer in the field of decorative, exposed-aggregate concrete. As it’s of utmost importance to us that we match the Orchid House concrete to the existing concrete and stucco surfaces of the Conservatory, we worked with local preservation experts John Milner Architects, concrete expert Robert Armbruster, Bancroft Construction Company, and others to perform a petrographic concrete analysis to identify the original makeup of the concrete and stucco, and then identify new mixes for the new concrete. Restoration of the bronze windows throughout the Orchid House continues, as does concrete aggregate work on the exterior walls. We look forward to reopening the Orchid House for all to enjoy in winter 2022.

The other components of Longwood Reimagined are progressing as well. You have most likely noticed the updated fencing encompassing our work area, which now includes the Conservatory Terrace, the walkway in front of the Main Conservatory, and the Lower Reception Suite. The fencing will remain in its current position until summer 2023. Along the fencing near the East Conservatory Plaza, you’ll find a series of informational graphics.
Clockwise from above:
Site view from west of Longwood Reimagined. At center is the new 32,000-square-foot West Conservatory; Orchid House concrete aggregate samples displayed for color-match review; Elevation of new Orchid House trellis, featuring an in-house designed pattern based on the Longwood Gardens logomark.
Left: Bronze and mica sconce from the Lower Reception Suite. The sconces were removed for restoration.

Above: View of Conservatory Terrace featuring the new allée of yellowwood trees that will be planted as part of Longwood Reimagined.

Right: The Cascade Garden, designed by legendary landscape architect Roberto Burle Marx, will be preserved in a new 3,800-square-foot glasshouse.

Opposite: West entry view of the new West Conservatory.
To accommodate the new buildings, we have also completed drilling for the new geothermal wells. The geothermal well system will use the earth’s stable soil temperature to provide heating and cooling for the new buildings.

We are thrilled that the footing excavation and wall framing have begun for the West Conservatory, one of the two new 21st century glasshouses—the other being the 3,800-square-foot glasshouse that will be the home to the preserved Cascade Garden designed by renowned landscape architect Roberto Burle Marx. The 32,000-square-foot West Conservatory is the centerpiece and largest component of the project, featuring a Mediterranean-inspired plant palette, as well as seasonal display plantings. It will be our largest garden under glass, featuring the most ambitious horticultural plan in Longwood's history—and we'll be sure to update you on its progress, and all the other components of Longwood Reimagined.

Reimagining has always been part of our story, and this next chapter imagines a future more beautiful and inspiring than ever before. We’re reflecting our founder’s vision and embodying our mission to create a world apart accessible to all for the celebration and enjoyment of horticulture—and we’re so very grateful to continue that journey with you.

that explain the scope and scale of Longwood Reimagined, as well as our history of innovation and change. As they’ve been since the start of the project, our grand Conservatory display spaces, including our East Conservatory, Main Conservatory, and Exhibition Hall, as well as our Acacia Passage and Silver Garden remain open for you to enjoy. Preservation—both on a large and small scale—is inherent throughout the project.

As part of our preparation in closing the Lower Reception Suite, we removed the space’s sconces which will be restored and integrated into the new design. Similar in materials to other light fixtures that are original to the Conservatory, the bronze and mica sconces are believed to be original to the Lower Reception Suite, which was completed in 1921.

While we removed approximately 25 trees from the Conservatory Terrace and Lower Reception Suite in mid-November, we will be planting 63 trees in that area, including 28 yellowwood trees, 29 espaliered magnolias, and six deodar cedars, as part of the project—and all part of the imaginative pathways and vistas that will expand and connect our Conservatory grounds, featuring more than 440 trees and 1,600 shrubs. In addition, some of the wood from the removed trees will be reclaimed for use in other aspects of the project.
Light: Installations by Bruce Munro

Immerse yourself in the dazzling artistry and infinite imagination of artist Bruce Munro as he returns to Longwood 10 years after his debut exhibition in our Gardens.

Light: Installations by Bruce Munro is an entirely new, breathtaking exhibition with eight installations spanning our indoor spaces and outdoor vistas.

Look on in wonder at the luminous Field of Light, featuring 18,000 illuminated bulbs adorning the landscape amid our Large and Small Lakes. Explore and observe how beautifully Munro’s artistry interacts with our expansive Orchard, Pear-Shaped Basin, and other locations throughout the Gardens.

Inside the Conservatory, see the Exhibition Hall transformed into a sparkling oasis of colorful reflections, inspired by the waterlily. In the East Conservatory, a monumental geodesic sphere fashioned from 1,820 bottles radiates light and excitement.

Light will not only transform our landscapes … but captivate all who experience it.

Spring Blooms
On View April 2–May 1

Step into spring … the season of renewal, of growth, of ever-evolving splendor. Our millions of tiny geophytes begin the season, blanketing our vistas with sweeps of spring-has-sprung color.

As the season unfolds, flowering trees delightfully punctuate the landscape, radiant tulips stretch towards the sun, and the delicious fragrance of wisteria floats along the breeze, beckoning you further into the effervescent beauty of spring.

Put spring in all of your steps.
